WATHA CASE GOES TO JURY AT 3:45

Judge Littleford Occupied Most of the Morning With Plea for Defense

ASSIST. ATTORNEY-GENERAL CLOSED FOR STATE

Judge Mansfield's Charge to the Jury a Splendid Document--Attorney C. L. Flory Makes Plea for Client on Trial for His Life.

The first of the 15 first degree murder cases growing out of the Etherington lynching on July 8 is now in the hands of the jury. The trial of Monteille Watha, which commenced Dec. 5, was given into the jury's hands at 3:45 this afternoon. Judge Mansfield's charge, delivered at 3:45 p.m., is given in full in this paper.

In his closing speech State's Attorney Miller said the reason the Watha case was selected for trial before the others was that the state desired to begin at the beginning, and he alleged that it was Watha's conduct that started the trouble at the jail on July 8.

The court room was packed to suffocation Friday morning at 8:30 o'clock by a crowd that was anxious to hear the argument of Judge Wm. Littleford of Cincinnati, who closed the case for the defense in the Watha murder trial. The interest in the case had become most intense, and before the case was called by Judge Mansfield, the persons in the corridors were guessing, and in some cases gambling upon the verdict of the jury.

Mr. Seth McMillen, a special counselor in the attorney general's office at Columbus, was seated at the counsel table with the attorneys for the prosecution. Mr. McMillen has been here for several days and assisting in the preparation of the State's case, especially in the matter of getting out the records of testimony.

Judge Littleford made his argument in a most eloquent manner, and his marshaling of testimony and its application to the case at bar, was most careful, and absolutely to the point, which he put in issue, when the defendant's plea of not guilty was made and taken into consideration.

The general audience was considerably augmented by a large attendance of the members of the Licking county bar who were interested in hearing Judge Littleford, who is well and favorably known as a most able criminal lawyer, to most of them.

The argument, as a whole, was intended to show that the defendant, Watha, was not nor could he be guilty of any premeditated malice toward Etherington as he did not know the man and was forced to make the speech, which he did by a crowd of white rowdies, who wanted to make a fool of the defendant.

The speaker also impressed upon the minds of the jurors that this case was not involving dollars and cents, a breach of contract, or a breach of promise, but involving a man's life, and he urged them to be more than careful in the making up of their verdict, and they must find that Watha had the intent of murder in his heart when he made his speech.

Judge Littleford began his argument at 9:10 o'clock by congratulating the jury upon the fact that their duties were nearly finished, and that he extended his thanks for the patience with which the jury had performed their duties, which duties took them from the comforts of home and the pleasure of the association with their families. The judge also said that in his experience of twenty-five years at the practice of law he had never come into contact with a judge who was more fair, more courteous or more learned than Judge Mansfield had proven himself during the trial. He also complimented the jury upon their intelligence and said that he did not believe that they would return a verdict which made a scapegoat of a poor colored man, upon whom the state wished to place the responsibility of a crime, which was committed by white men. He further said:

"The days of the scapegoat are past and you, gentlemen, will not take this colored man's life in expiation of a crime committed by others."

JUDGE LITTLEFORD'S ARGUMENT FOR THE DEFENDANT

Evidence has been admitted showing, on the forenoon of that day, raids were made upon Bolton's, Henry's and the Bismarck, disclosing a story of the formation of a number of mobs and much rioting and lawlessness lasting through the day. The court admitted this evidence on the ground that it showed the state of mind of the people of Newark, or a large portion of them on that day.

Gentlemen, the defendant at the bar is not in the least responsible for that condition of affairs; he was not on the streets of Newark that day until 7:30 in the evening, except for a few minutes to buy some turpentine at 2 o'clock. When he appeared upon the scene near the jail at 7:30 in the evening he was seized by some white men in the crowd there, hoisted upon a rock near the jail and told to make a speech. What he said was put into his mouth by those who placed him on the rock. The crowd hooted, jeered and laughed at him. Nearly all of the witnesses for the state, as well as those for the defense, agreed that he said over and over again when he was standing on that rock that he was opposed to lynching law and against mob violence.

The state of mind of the people of Newark who were opposing the enforcement of this law must be sought further. The people of this section are nearly all of Anglo Saxon origin with a sprinkling of German and Irish stock. History shows that neither the English, Irish or German race have ever peacefully submitted to a law which they believed to be wrong. I am not here to say that this beautiful city is not disgraced by this crime, and it will recover from any strictures that have been made concerning the municipality, but these officials must bear the responsibility of premeditation in not doing any specified period of time, but any time, whether it was a second or two seconds, was plenty of time to deliberate or premeditate a murder and that if the defendant had a criminal intent when he made the speech and he was supposed to presume and also to know the natural consequences of any act committed by him or words that he may have said which led the mob to lynch Etherington, and Mr. Miller also contended that the defendant knew what the consequences of his act would be when he made the speech which incited the mob to take Etherington out of the jail and lynch him.

Mr. Miller also laid particular importance to the remark he claimed was made by Judge Littleford in the morning, that he acknowledged the speech of the defendant might have incited the crowd to kill Etherington, and Mr. Miller then reviewed the testimony at length and quoted from the city from Cleveland, O., but as stenographer's transcript, tending to show that Watha knew and expected kind has always absolutely refused to be regulated, and attempts to regulate their personal habits and private beliefs have always stirred men to the most bitter resentment. As I have said, with the right or wrong of the Rose County Local option law by which a county may vote its entire territory dry, even the city that is within its limits, I have nothing to do here. But the effect of the law upon the people who live in a city, a majority of whom are opposed to the law, is a matter of the greatest importance in this case. Upon the one side are, generally the people of the country districts who believe that drinking is the cause of almost all poverty and crime. Upon the other side, are the majority of the city dwellers, who do not hold to that belief, and who are just as firm and conscientious in their opinion that the question of a man's drinking liquor is his own personal affair and no one else's.

Here in Newark, with its twenty-six thousand inhabitants, there are near beer bottles made than in any place in the world. There are immense glass blowing factories. There are other large factories. Many thousands of laboring men who work in these factories—in fact, a majority of the people of Newark—voted wet. These working men believe that they have the right to do their drinking of beer at the bar just as nearly all well-to-do city people believe they have the right to put wine on their tables at home. Against any interference with this right by the people of the country districts, the people of the city who believe in theatre going, card playing, dancing and a good deal of freedom in all of the enjoyments of life, will always bitterly protest. The city people will always elect officers who will wink at the enforcement of the law. Against the enforcement of the law by officers sworn in by country magistrates there will always be resistance by the city people who regard such attempted enforcement by outsiders as nothing short of tyranny.

These were the conditions that produced the feeling of lawlessness that prevailed in the streets of Newark on that 8th day of July when the invaders of the city shot one of the "wets," and in turn had one of their own number lynched upon a telegraph pole in the very heart of Newark. Mr. Miller laid stress upon the fact that upon the fatal day of July, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, in the county jail, men were there who made the remark: "This is no place, let's go and hold a meeting," showing that the general public in Newark knew that a man was to be lynched, and that the testimony showed that a number of the citizens of Newark demanded the life blood of young Etherington without the due process of law, and stated to the jury that he had no desire to see the man on trial convicted of the crime of which he is charged unless he is guilty, but if he is guilty he should be convicted. Continuing Mr. Miller said:

"I will answer Mr. Flory's and Judge Littleford's question as to why this negro was put on trial instead of one of the other defendants similarly indicted. I will tell you why; he state selected Watha as the first of the defendants to be tried. He was the first man to demand the life blood of Carl Etherington; he was the man who put the mob in motion, which afterward pulled poor Carl Etherington out of the jail; stabbed him, mistreated him and finally hanged him, and I will add that the state of Ohio will prosecute every man connected with the lynching of Etherington to the fullest extent allowed by the laws of Ohio. The others will be tried in as rapid succession as possible, and each will have to answer for his part in that lynching, the same as this defendant is now on trial to answer for his part.

Mr. Miller then, by permission of the court, read to the jury the charges made by the court to the jury before argument, which were requested by the state, which charges were to the effect that under the law of Ohio, whoever aided, abetted or procured the murder of Etherington was equally guilty with the ones who committed the physical act of hanging Etherington.

"This defendant is charged in the indictment with putting the rope around Etherington's neck, climbed the pole, pulled upon the rope which suspended Etherington until his death, and with every other act leading up to the unfortunate man's death; and the prosecutor and I made these charges with a full knowledge of the fact that Watha was not present when Etherington was hanged or that he was present when the jail was broken into; but, gentlemen, under the law made by the state legislature, if this defendant aided, abetted or procured the death of Etherington, the state contends with the authority of the statute and the courts, that he is as guilty as the man or men who actually murdered Etherington and must answer to you for his death."

At this point court adjourned for the noon recess but a number of women remained and ate lunches, in order to keep their seats which are now at a premium.

Mr. Miller resumed his argument shortly after 1 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Mr. Miller at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon resumed his argument and began a resume of the testimony given before, but before this he tried to impress upon the jury that deliberation of premeditation did not require any specified period of time, but any time, whether it was a second or two seconds, was plenty of time to deliberate or premeditate a murder and that if the defendant had a criminal intent when he made the speech and he was supposed to presume and also to know the natural consequences of any act committed by him or words that he may have said which led the mob to lynch Etherington.

Mr. Miller also laid particular importance to the remark he claimed was made by Judge Littleford in the morning, that he acknowledged the speech of the defendant might have incited the crowd to kill Etherington.

Mr. Miller then reviewed the testimony at length and quoted from the city from Cleveland, O., but as stenographer's transcript, tending to show that Watha knew and expected people of this city are against it just as emphatically as they are in any other intelligent community in this land."

Judge Littleford concluded his argument at 10:30 and the jury was given a recess after which he was showered with congratulations by lawyers and others who had heard his argument.

MR. MILLER CLOSES FOR THE PROSECUTION

As soon as Judge Littleford had concluded his argument and a short recess was taken, Hon. William H. Miller, assistant attorney general of Ohio, addressed the jury in the closing argument.

Mr. Miller is a forcible speaker, and in his address his earnestness or the cause for which he was engaged led him to become dramatic. His voice is well modulated and can be distinctly heard to the remotest parts of the court room, and the large audience listened with great interest upon what he had to say.

He disavowed any personal interest or feeling in this prosecution but stated that it was his duty to be just where he was, to urge the vindication of law and justice as given by the legislature and the courts of Ohio.

Mr. Miller laid stress upon the fact that upon the fatal day of July, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, in the county jail, men were there who made the remark: "This is no place, let's go and hold a meeting," showing that the general public in Newark knew that a man was to be lynched, and that the testimony showed that a number of the citizens of Newark demanded the life blood of young Etherington without the due process of law, and stated to the jury that he had no desire to see the man on trial convicted of the crime of which he is charged unless he is guilty, but if he is guilty he should be convicted. Continuing Mr. Miller said:

"I will answer Mr. Flory's and Judge Littleford's question as to why this negro was put on trial instead of one of the other defendants similarly indicted. I will tell you why; he state selected Watha as the first of the defendants to be tried. He was the first man to demand the life blood of Carl Etherington; he was the man who put the mob in motion, which afterward pulled poor Carl Etherington out of the jail; stabbed him, mistreated him and finally hanged him, and I will add that the state of Ohio will prosecute every man connected with the lynching of Etherington to the fullest extent allowed by the laws of Ohio. The others will be tried in as rapid succession as possible, and each will have to answer for his part in that lynching, the same as this defendant is now on trial to answer for his part.

"The state did not select Watha in account of his color as the first defendant to be tried for this murder, but because he was the first to start that mob on its mission of riot and bloodshed which resulted in the death of Carl Etherington."

Mr. Miller occupied considerable time in attempting to show to the jury that Watha knew what he was talking about, and that he knew Bill Howard was dead when he made his speech, and quoted a number of witnesses.

"Gentlemen, the testimony shows that Watha's speech was made not later than 7:30, and the attack on the jail was not made, according to the testimony of the then deputy sheriff, Thomas H. Jones, until after 9:30 o'clock, and from the testimony of other witnesses it was later than 9:40 o'clock that night, or until after the arrival of Panhandle train No. 20, due at that time, upon which many thought troops would arrive.

"With equal pertinacity Mr. Hanley denied that he was a corporation tool, and he returned the fire by delicately insinuating that there was more danger in electing a lawyer to the Senate than the employee of a gas company.

Neither of the candidates was in the same good form displayed at Mansfield.

Mr. Hanley especially being at a disadvantage because of a cold and severe hoarseness. Tuscarawas county is in Pomerene's territory, and the Canton candidate is personally very popular within its borders. The audience last night was made up for the greater part of his partisans, and while Chairman Hanley was not devoid of friends, yet the cheers and the sympathy were largely with and for Pomerene.

Yet the auditors were fair, and there were no partisan interruptions. Each candidate as he rose to speak was presented with a bouquet, and each gracefully presented the flowers to his audience.

It is apparent, though, that as usual in affairs of this kind, the feeling of antizionism is growing beneath the crust of courtesy. The debate last night was especially interesting because it was believed that it would have a bearing upon the legislative votes in this county and senatorial district.

In the district are William Green of Coshocton, who was elected president pro tem. of the Senate over John Stockwell of Cleveland, the Pomerene candidate, and Dr. S. B. McGuire, who voted to elect him.

In the county are Representatives Arthur McWilliams and Fred Bartlewich. Important inquiry here develops the fact that Democratic sentiment is largely opposed to the delegate, and this condition was freely stated in the hotel lobbies and in the hall itself.

Because of the biting storm the attendance was far from expectations. Delegations came in from near-by towns, but even with these additions the audience was small. The meeting was presided over by Dr. E. A. Wolf, mayor of Dennison and a Pomerene supporter. Just before the opening of the affair a corps of special newsboys appeared with copies of a Cleveland paper which is opposing Hanley, in which was printed an alleged record of his corporation affiliations.

"Gentlemen, how could a speech, only a small part of which could be understood by those to whom it was made, incite a mob to murder or procure the murder of a man or in any way give them a criminal intent, which is necessary to justify you in taking this defendant's life?"

"Gentlemen, I want to say to you that this defendant had cador in his testimony, and withstood the grueling cross-examination. Of course, for the state, and answered the questions put to him in the most adroit and insidious manner possible, in a positive, courteous, and convincing manner, and never for a moment did he vary from his statement made upon his direct examination.

"Mr. Chauncey Neer, a white man, testifies that Watha was pushed up on the rock by force, and told by the crowd to make a 'spit.' Watha testifies to the same effect; these are not all, but Martin L. Young, Albert Nutter and others, also testify to the same effect, and that Watha resisted by physical force the effort of the good natured crowd, while he laughed and kept telling the crowd that he couldn't make a speech."

Mr. Flory also detailed other testimony, which was given to show

NIGHTLY DEBATES PROMISED

Although Pressure is Being Brought to Bear to Have Them Called Off

LAST NIGHT'S MEETING of Senatorial Aspirants at New Philadelphia Fairly Well Attended.

Columbus, Dec. 16.—Congressman-elect Whitacre, Pomerene's campaign manager said today he would endeavor to have Pomerene and Hanley debate every night next week. He thinks they have Hanley on the run. He said:

"In the two debates so far Hanley has spent most of his time telling of his start in life and the other part defending his record as representative of the special interests. I never thought Hanley wanted to debate very badly but he demanded a debate to attract notice and sympathy. He can have all he wants now and more."

Prominent Democrats are bringing pressure to bear to have the debates called off, one rumor saying Hanley is behind this movement. Whitacre says Pomerene will invite Hanley to debate at Ada on Saturday night.

New Philadelphia, Dec. 16.—As at Mansfield and at Columbus, the debate centered upon the alleged disqualification of Chairman Hanley as a candidate because of his affiliations in the business world. With unyielding pertinacity Mr. Pomerene insisted that to elect his adversary would be a violation of the pledges of the Democratic party that would bring ruin and disaster to its train.

With equal pertinacity Mr. Hanley denied that he was a corporation tool, and he returned the fire by delicately insinuating that there was more danger in electing a lawyer to the Senate than the employee of a gas company.

Neither of the candidates was in the same good form displayed at Mansfield. Mr. Hanley especially being at a disadvantage because of a cold and severe hoarseness. Just before the opening of the affair a corps of special newsboys appeared with copies of a Cleveland paper which is opposing Hanley, in which was printed an alleged record of his corporation affiliations.

In his opening Mr. Pomerene declared that a great fight was on in the United States between the reactionaries and the progressives, and Holiday Greetings Telegrams.

The Western Union Telegraph Co.

is introducing a number of new and pleasing features, such as the night letter service and the ocean mail service, now announces a "holiday greeting form," which will be popular on Christmas Day and New Year's Eve. Sons who are away from their mothers, husbands separated from wives and sweethearts who are in different sections of the country will be quick to take advantage of the new service. In sending a holiday greeting message, you write it upon a special blank, which is decorated with holly, and your message is copied upon a similar blank at the other end of the line. In reality it is the same as sending a picture post card by wire, and Manager Rhoads smiling declares that it costs no more than an ordinary telegram.

MURDER TRIAL

other, is guilty of murder in the first degree.

Second—Whoever purposely and deliberately kills another is guilty of murder in the second degree.

Third—Whoever unlawfully kills another without malice, and without deliberation and premeditation, is guilty of manslaughter. Manslaughter is also defined as the unintentional killing of another while in the commission of an unlawful act.

Fourth—Assault and battery is the unlawful striking or wounding of another.

Fifth—An assault is an act done towards the commission of a battery.

While the indictment in this case charges the defendant as being a principal in the commission of the alleged crime, yet it is not claimed by the state that he was in fact present at the time and actively participated in the actual hanging, but that he was an accessory thereto before the fact. The state, therefore, invokes the operation of a section of the general code in the prosecution of this case, and that is: "Whosoever aids, abets, or procures another to commit any offense, may be prosecuted as if he were the principal offender."

A principal to a crime is a person who is the chief actor and present at its perpetration.

An accessory is he who is not the chief actor in the perpetration of the crime, nor present at its perpetration, but is in some way criminally concerned therein either before or after the fact. An accessory is either an abettor, aider, or procurer, or all of these, as the circumstances of a particular case may show.

Taking, then, the statute defining the principal crime charged, and the statute in reference to aiders, abettors and procurers, and the indictment against the defendant, before the defendant can be convicted of murder in the first degree, you must be satisfied, from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, of each and all of the following preparations:

First—That the said Carl Etherington was a living person, and that he is now dead.

Second—That he was killed by some person or persons, known or unknown, in the manner and by the means charged and described in said indictment, on or about the 8th day of July, 1910.

Third—That he was killed in the county of Licking, and state of Ohio.

Fourth—That he was killed unlawfully.

Fifth—That such killing was done purposely.

Sixth—That it was done maliciously.

Seventh—That it was done with deliberation and premeditation.

Eighth—That the defendant procured, aided or abetted in said unlawful killing of said Carl Etherington.

Ninth—That he did it purposely.

Tenth—That he did it maliciously, and.

Eleventh—That he did it with deliberation and premeditation.

If the state has satisfied you of the existence of each and all of the facts I have mentioned, beyond a reasonable doubt, the defendant would be guilty of murder in the first degree. And unless you do so find he would not be guilty of murder in the first degree.

The law places a ban upon every form of mob law or rioting that results in injury to the life, limb or property of others. Therefore, the act of a mob, in causing the death of a person, is unlawful, and subjects the perpetrators, and those criminally connected with it, to the penalties of the law.

So, in this case, if you find from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that on or about the 8th day of July, 1910, said Carl Etherington was then a living person; that or about said date he came to his death by lynching at the hands of a mob, in the county of Licking and state of Ohio, such finding would be conclusive of the first four propositions to which have called your attention. If you have a reasonable doubt as to the existence of any one of said four propositions, you need not inquire further, but will, in such event, return a verdict of not guilty.

Assuming, however, for the purpose of this instruction, that you find the affirmative of such first four propositions from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, we will pass to the next proposition, and that is: That such killing was done purposely. To do an act purposely means to do it intentionally. It involves an operation of the mind, and an exercise of the will—a design to do the act and intention to do the same.

It is a general proposition of law applicable to this case that what a man does willfully, he intends to do, and that he intends the natural and probable consequences of his own voluntary acts, unless the circumstances are such as to indicate the absence of such intention. The presence or absence of purpose is a question of fact, to be determined by the jury from all the evidence and circumstances of the case.

Was the killing done maliciously? Malice is a willfully formed design to do another an unlawful injury. It springs from a wicked, depraved or evil heart. It is not necessary that it should be prompted by ill-will. We are apt to associate malice with anger, hatred or revenge. But malice, in the eyes of the law, may exist without either of these passions, it relates to the moral qualities of a person's acts. Its general use, in law, is to express an act done without any sufficient reason when the act is wrong in itself. In a legal sense, it means a wrongful act done intentionally, without just cause or excuse. An act done with a wicked mind, and attended with such circumstances as plainly indicates a heart regardless of social duty and fully bent on mischief, indicates malice within the meaning of the law.

To premeditate and deliberate means to plan and fix upon some act or deed, or to think about it before hand, and to consider and turn over in the mind; it involves the operation of the mind; to consider it, reflect upon it, and then act. The law fixes no time within which deliberation and premeditation shall take place. It is not necessary that it shall exist for any particular length of time, except a sufficient time therefor before the act is done.

The next proposition is: Did the defendant procure, abet or aid in the unlawful killing of said Carl Etherington? As I have said, an aider, abettor, or procurer, as understood in criminal law, is an accessory either before or after the fact. The word "fact" simply means the main event or occurrence; as applied to this case, would be the procuring, aiding and abetting the defendant, if at all, in the lynching of said Carl Etherington.

To determine whether a person charged with a crime is an accessory overt acts in connection therewith are to be taken into consideration, with all the circumstances surrounding the party at the time. Any words or acts, signs or mottoes, said, done or made for the purpose of encouraging the commission of the crime are sufficient. Any acts, acts or signs, intended and naturally calculated to incite, excite, influence the minds of those to whom directed to deeds of violence, aid such overt acts as would exonerate one as being an accessory to them.

But the commission of the crime occurring subsequent thereto and connected re-with by a successive and contorted series of events that naturally logically lead up to the commission of such crime.

Nor is it necessary that there be acts of the accessory shoddy or directly incite or expressly command the principal or principals to commit the homicide or crime. It is enough proven beyond a reasonable doubt that the acts or words of these accessory, or party sought to be exonerated were intended to secure unlawful killing of the party killed.

Whether or not the accessory or party sought to be exonerated were intended to secure unlawful killing of the party killed.

So, if you find from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the said Carl Etherington died on or about the 8th day of July, 1910, and that his death resulted from lynching by the mob and that the defendant was an accessory, as hereinbefore defined, in the commission of said unlawful killing, then you further find that such procurement, aiding and abetting by the party sought to be exonerated, was without malice, and without premeditation and deliberation, then you will return a verdict showing beyond a reasonable doubt guilty of manslaughter against the accessory; or, in other words, the accessory intended the final effect.

Whether or not the accessory or party sought to be exonerated was an accessory to the crime, under the law of Ohio it is provided that when three or more persons assemble together to do an unlawful act with force and violence, or, being assembled to do an unlawful act as aforesaid, agree with each other to do an unlawful act with force and violence, and make any preparation or movement therefor, they are guilty of riot. So if you find beyond a reasonable doubt that said Carl Etherington, on the 8th day of July, 1910, was unlawfully killed, and that prior thereto, on said day, said defendant was engaged in rioting, as he was defined in the term to you, and while so engaged, but not intending to procure, aid or abet the unlawful killing of said Carl Etherington, by overt acts, speech, words, motions or signs, or either of them, he, the said Monteille Warha, incited and inflamed the minds of a part of the persons who were engaged in said rioting, for the purpose of doing violence to the person of said defendant, or any person confined in jail, and such acts upon his part formed a link in the chain of connected and successive acts by the members of the mob of rioters, as it progressed from one event to another from such time, up to and culminating in the death of said Etherington, then your verdict should be that the defendant is guilty of manslaughter.

If, from the evidence, and beyond a reasonable doubt, you do not find that the state has proved that the defendant is guilty of manslaughter, as defined in the first proposition, and in the second proposition, then you will acquit him altogether of the crime of manslaughter.

As I have stated, murder in the second degree is the killing of a person being unlawfully, and maliciously. You will often find the difference between the first degree and murder in the second degree is that the element of deliberation and premeditation wanting in murder in the second degree, and with this exception, the other elements of murder in the second degree are the same in murder in the first degree.

Therefore, gentlemen, in doing whether the defendant is of this grade of crime, you will find in this case, you will apply the same definitions which I have given the murder in the second degree, or subject of murder in the first, manslaughter, you will next consider and determine whether the defendant's testimony that came from the witness stand.

If you find that on or about the 8th day of July, 1910, in the county of Licking and State of Ohio, said Carl Etherington was unlawfully killed and determine the matters known or unknown, and such strike evidence adduced during the trial.

If you find that on or about the 8th day of July, 1910, in the county of Licking, and state of Ohio, that it was unlawful; that it was done purposely and maliciously; that the defendant, purposely and with malice, to accomplish the killing of said deceased, aided, abetted or procured the same, the defendant would be guilty of murder in the second degree, and such should be your verdict. But, unless you do so find each and all of these facts and elements to exist, and beyond a reasonable doubt, he would not be guilty of murder in the second degree under the indictment in this case, and your verdict should be accordingly.

If you do not find the defendant guilty of either murder in the first degree, or second degree, you will next consider and determine whether the defendant is guilty of manslaughter.

If you do not find the defendant guilty of either murder in the first degree, or second degree, you will next consider and determine whether the defendant is guilty of manslaughter.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT ON NEWARK MAN

Italian Who Worked Here for Number of Weeks Dying in Columbus Hospital.

The men were not seen since and Sergeant Churches heard nothing more of them until informed of the shooting by officers who recognized his address in a book carried by the dying man.

Zino was fairly well dressed and when his clothing was searched at the hospital $12.50 was found.

Chief Carter personally assigned Churches on the case.

Notice was sent to the local police with instructions to notify Carmelo Armeno of the shooting of his relative. Armeno has not been located here, although his address was given as 59 Canal street.

With a fractured skull and five bullet holes in his body Rosario Zino, an Italian, 59 Canal street, this city, aged 29, is dying at St. Francis Hospital in Columbus, as the result of a brutal attack of which he was a victim at 9 o'clock Thursday night in a vacant lot near Second and State streets in Columbus.

Besides the broken bones, Zino has a fractured skull caused by a bullet and a cut across the nose, apparently the result of a blow. One bullet entered the back of the head, one the left shoulder, one the left wrist, one the right arm and one the right leg.

The man identified was established by a police bearing his name, and the address of Sergeant Vic Churches, the Columbus police chief, said all he knew of the man was that he was a Sicilian and a hard worker, who had come from Newark a few weeks ago, in search of employment.

Zino originally came here from Columbus. He returned there two days ago and Wednesday called at the home of Sergeant Churches and asked if there was any mail for him.

At the time he had a companion, and

matter how the present fight was determined, the struggle would go on. It was no longer "standpatism" against the world. No time was wasted in going directly to the warm argument of the Cantonian, who asserted that in the last campaign the Democratic party arrayed itself against sending representatives of the public corporations to Congress. He insisted that this doctrine should now be carried into execution.

Referring to the struggles against poverty described by Mr. Hanley at Mansfield, he bade his hearers to remember that the contest was not to be determined by the early struggles of any man. If this was to be the test, he reminded the audience that John D. Rockefeller began life as a poor, struggling boy, and yet he has amassed the greatest fortune in the world. But that was no reason for electing Rockefeller Senator. The same was true of Joseph Benson Forster, who was known as "Little Breeches." The issue, he insisted should be decided by the conditions existing today.

In reviewing the power of the "interests" in the United States Senate, he declared that Allen G. Thurman was defeated by the Pacific Railways because he tried to make them disgorge the money belonging to the United States. Senator George H. Pendleton was driven into private life by the machine politicians because he stood for the betterment of the public service. Another condition described was the action of the East Ohio Gas company last year in threatening to cut off the supply to Canton and Akron because an increase in rates was fought. This was a clever side thrust at his opponent, whose connections are mainly with gas companies.

After discussing the influence of environment upon character, he proceeded to demonstrate that it would be unsafe to trust a public service servant with framing the laws to regulate concerns of that description. No sane person would trust such a class of people to enact statutes, or city ordinances to regulate public utilities companies or grant authorities.

These utterances were meant, and were taken for attacks on Mr. Hanley very thinly disguised. As a sample of what came of electing public service servants to the United States senate, he quoted Elihu B. Root, of New York, who showed a millionaire client "how to do anything legally." A story was told of a man who bought a watch dog to guard a chicken coop only to be robbed of the fowls by the former owner of the animal, who got past the trustee. Mr. Hanley had promised, if elected, to resign his corporation positions. "I want to ask him if his former masters could get him if he was elected senator?"

A sensational episode was furnished when Mr. Pomerene asked if a man of Hanley's description had been nominated at Dayton for senator whether he would be elected. "Governor Harmon was elected," came a voice from the hall, "and he was a corporation attorney."

Mr. Pomerene, with vehemence, said that it was true that Governor Harmon represented corporations, but he was also general attorney, and the poorest man or woman could secure his services as well as the wealthiest corporation. His whole life was an open record on this point. This defense was loudly cheered.

Taking up the failure to enumerate in the state call a requirement for the nomination of a United States senator, he declared that he did not know why it was omitted.

"It is a coincidence, though that the vice-chairman of the meeting is a candidate," said Mr. Pomerene.

Reiterating the charges of suppression, he failed to declare Hanley responsible for it. "Innocent though he may have been, it was a grave mistake," was the way he put it.

No reference was made to Governor Harmon's share in this transaction as described by Mr. Hanley at Mansfield last night.

In closing his opening remarks he asserted that to elect a reactionary would be a breach of contract with the people of Ohio, and disaster would follow to the Democracy.

In answering Mr. Pomerene's remarks, Mr. Hanley began bring back at the newspaper league, which he declared was endeavoring to select a United States senator for the Democratic party. This sentiment was received with loud applause. The speaker asked, he said, not for sympathy from this new audience, but only fair play and a square deal.

Some time was given to the ethics of newspaper criticism, and the declaration was made that "A newspaper published without a conscience was a public danger."

Taking up the charges published last night he laughed at the allegation that he was a millionaire. Then he described the various companies with which he is connected, and denied that New York capital was interested in the Columbus Natural Gas company, and said that the article had doctored up the concerns in order to make him look greater as a corporationist. The natural gas business was merely buying the produce from West Virginia companies owning the wells. A number of the companies named had passed out of business many years ago. These were pipeline companies organized when the gas boom was on in Indiana.

As for the treasurership of the Dayton Street Railway company he admitted holding it. He held $7,500 of stock in it upon which $3,500 was due. As for owning a piece of property valued at $30,446, he said that he bought it four years ago for $45,000 and there is standing against it a mortgage for $25,000. If he lived long enough to clear away this indebtedness this property would be a provision for his family. Thanks were returned for the opportunity of making public these intimate details.

Again he denied that he support-do. When I said last night at Mansfield I would resign my present position, I had the highest motives. I would do that in order to give the people of Ohio all my time at Washington. The senatorship is a big enough job for any one man."

He then asked Pomerene whether, if elected senator, would disorganize his business and serve the state of Ohio alone. In a clear voice that gentleman declared he would. A Roland for an Oliver was given in replying to the story of the theft of the chickens.

"There was an omission in that story," said Mr. Hanley. "He failed to tell you that Elihu B. Root was a lawyer."

At this clever touch the audience fairly roared. "I'm a gas man," he continued, "and you're a lawyer, Mr. Pomerene."

CODE BILL USED AS HOUSE BRAKE

Fear of New Legislation Allayed
by Rigid Rule.

MEMBERS TAKE THINGS EASY

Representatives Talk So Much That Business Is Transacted With Difficulty—Landscapes In New York Keep Ethna Root Off The Supreme Bench.
The Future of Speaker Cannon.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Dec. 16.—Speakers for fear that it might attract something besides passing the appropriation bills the house has resorted to having the code bill take up Wednesday of each week, which day was before the only out-of-order legislation.

Now everybody who wants anything passed is told that the only day upon which the bills could be considered is taken up with the code bill. As this is a revision of the United States laws relating to the judiciary it will be a fruitful theme of debate. The proposed legislation relating to injunctions may be considered in this bill.

For those who fear certain legislation may pass the code bill is most satisfactory. It also assures those who do not want to hustle that they may take things easy.

The Usual Bear Garden.

The house of representatives is more disorderly than ever, if that is a possible condition. Perhaps it is because so many members have so much to say to one another that they are unusually noisy at the beginning of the short session.

No one pays much attention to what is going on save the member interested in the bill which may be pending, and perhaps the member who may be opposed to it. Much time is wasted in trying to maintain sufficient order so that business can be transacted.

It becomes more and more apparent that if the new appointment enlarges the house membership the desks must be taken out and benches substituted such as they have in the English house of commons.

Would Have Been Chief Justice.

Ethna Root would have been chief justice of the supreme court if the New York legislature had been Republican. As it is, Root will remain in the senate. It is not a disappointment to him, but rather a relief. It is true that he would have liked the honor but he would not have relished tying himself up to a perpetual grind for the balance of his life.

Now that it is all over some doubt is expressed as to whether Root could have been confirmed, but it would have been a strange thing for the senate to refuse confirmation to one of its members. It refused to confirm an ex-senator when Grant named George H.
Williams for chief justice, but there were reasons for so doing which were not made public at the time nor since.

Tennessee Versus Scotland.

Congressman Austin of Tennessee was at one time consul at Glasgow, Scotland, but when an opportunity arose to represent a Tennessee district in congress he promptly gave up the consular position.

"The change from Tennessee to Scotland was too great for me," he said. "It rained 226 days of the year, and I had to have a fire in my office every day. The fog and damp weather were very trying. I burned a light all of November during the daytime."
And all the while sunny Tennessee seemed pretty good to me. The bright, cheerful days, the warm weather, the dry atmosphere of the mountains, never seemed so good as when I returned.
I might have enjoyed the consular service in a better climate, but as between Scotland and Tennessee I'll take Tennessee every time."

To See Uncle Joe In Action.

"There is one great regret I have in not being a member of the Sixty-second congress," said Congressman O'Conor of New York, "and that is the fact that I will not be there to see Uncle Joe in action. I can well fancy that he will be a terror to the Democrats and that he will hit them hard when he is a free lance on the floor of the house."

With many years' experience and eight years' service as speaker it is estimated he will be better equipped for the duty of a private member than any other man on his side of the house.

Pennsylvania Was There.

There was a Pennsylvania claim bid before the house, and the members from that state were present in force.
"It is a great pleasure," remarked Congressman Mann of Illinois, who is a tall, wavy-haired and fighty chap in his time, "to have a bill relating to Pennsylvania before the house, because this is the first time in my service here that the Pennsylvania delegation has been on the floor at one time, a marked distinction for the house."

"And they will be here next year," noted Ladd, with especial reference to the changes in the Illinois delegation.

"I have noticed that you are sometimes absent," was a remark by Butler, who knew that Mann prides himself on his constant attendance when the hearts is in session.

You must see through walls, then,
was Mann's parting shot.

MRS. C. W. MORSE

FILES PETITION FOR PARDON OF HER HUSBAND WITH PRESIDENT TAFT.

In Letters to Chief Executive She Calls Sentence of Morse "Outrageous"—Much Interest in the Case.

Washington, Dec. 16.—Charles W. Morse's petition for pardon has been formally presented to the department of justice. One section of the plea of the convicted New York banker came in a large express package and was signed with the names of thousands of persons of prominence.

Mrs. Morse has made another petition for her husband and this has been presented to President Taft by Senator Hale. The president sent it at once to Attorney General Wickes, who turned it over to the attorney in charge of pardons.

Mrs. Morse's personal petition came in the form of a letter, addressed to the president. It was typewritten and covered about two pages of note paper. In it Mrs. Morse made a simple, business-like plea for the president's attention, to what she said was an "unusually popular interest in the case." She declared that the general sentiment of the many thousands of people who had signed her petition was that the sentence imposed upon her husband was "outrageous," that he had no intention of wronging the National Bank of North America, that no depositor had lost a dollar and that at most he had only been found guilty of a technical violation of the national bank laws.

Her letter is conceded to be one of the most remarkable of its kind ever received at the department. Approximately 50,000 names are signed to the petition.

It may be weeks or months before Morse's pardon is granted or denied.

What to Do for a Sickly Child—Trial Free

Many a mother has written thanks after following these suggestions

It has always been a moving question just what to do with an ailing child for mothers disagree and few doctors specialize in it. But too much is certain that in the majority of cases family bowel movement is at the bottom of the trouble.

The first thing then to do with a complaining child is to give it a laxative, not a mere fruit-salad. Find the true, genuine, scientific laxative. Many are recommended but few have been found worthy. Among the latter none stand out more prominently than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which mothers in all parts of the country have used for a generation.

It can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. No child will refuse it as it is not a bad-tasting and violent cathartic pill. It has a mild, gentle non-griping liquid. It has

Dr. Caldwell does not feel that the purchase of his remedy ends his obligation. He has specialized in stomach, liver and bowel diseases for over forty years and will be pleased to give the reader any advice on the subject free of charge. All are welcome to write him. also tonic properties that strengthen and tone the little stomach and bowel muscles so that they begin to do their work naturally again. Mrs. Ella N. Williams, Wathena, Kas., and Mrs. Emma Blackship of Bedford, Ind., always give their children Syrup Pepsin.

If you hesitate to get even a fifty cent bottle and do not care to ask your neighbor about it (who probably is a user of Syrup Pepsin), then write Dr. Caldwell and he will cheerfully send you a sample bottle free of charge and in this way you can make a test without expense. Simply send your name and address to the doctor. A great many thousand mothers have had a free sample in recent years, gave it to the children according to directions and now have healthy, strong youngsters.

NEWARK, OHIO.

COMMUNICATED

Granville, Dec. 16.—For the benefit of Granville readers I desire to make a statement regarding the suit filed in the Common Pleas court by the village of Granville against the Crawford Natural Gas company.

The people targeted do not seem to understand the merits of this case. This is in part their own fault as they have not inquired of those able to enlighten them, and in part because of being sometimes imposed upon and sometimes paid to by unscrupulous misinformed. The case resolves itself into this: Has the gas company a contract with Granville or not? The claim that they have based on the ordinance records, etc., that some twelve years ago the gas company signed a contract for 15 years duration to furnish gas, at 10¢ per 1000 cubic feet, being fixed to the contract, no matter what rate. At the end of ten years, the company fulfilling its part, and in full accord of law, leaving councils and empowering them to fix such rates as gas, water, steam, heat, etc., passed an ordinance fixing a per-making meter rates, five times above what the company was charging at the time, and in so doing, increased 100 per cent above its original. The gas company knew the wrong and counseled actions were taken to sign off the contract. That will not make them stand by it. On the other hand, they should not expect us to believe they stand as a wife does to her husband in this contract over so long a period of time. They have made twelve years of the same come braced by various legal tests other than the ones mentioned, most people for sale of their interests.

"SIR OLUF" GIVEN BY THE DENISON CHORAL SOCIETY

Granville, Dec. 16. The second of the Christmas concerts given by the Englewood Choral Society of Denison University was that given in the Baptist church Thursday afternoon when the music-loving people of Granville and Newark were given an opportunity of hearing the three solo artists who contributed solo numbers, thus giving the audience another type of music other than oratorio.

The attendance Thursday afternoon was very flattering and was a high tribute to the efficiency of the artist who took part in the program. The principal feature of the afternoon program was the rendering of a setting new cantata, "Sir Oluf," by the popular composer, Harry Ware, the text by Cecil Ganting, a friend of the poet, in two lecture courses. The work was first given by a choir of women only, assisted by soprano and contralto soloists, and the chorus was greatly augmented through the collaboration of the president, Miss Marion Ross, who took the soprano solos.

"Sir Oluf," the new choral work, is based on a northern legend in which malignant spirits invoke a curse upon a mortal on the morning of his bridal day. The fantastic intensity inherent in a narrative poem, this description has afforded the composer an opportunity of developing in a choral movement, and in the soprano solo, a feeling of suspense, of morose power, that throws into bold relief the baritone solos in which Sir Oluf exists in the constancy of an immortal love that ethereal beings cannot overcome.

From the technical as well as artistic standpoint the work has very genuine merit there is a contrast in the disposition of the choir and solo, variety of movement, sustainability, and excellent voice leading. The effuse music of the chorus serves as an effective foil for the passionate directness and strength of the baritone solos, which cannot help but appeal to the imagination of the hearer. All the artists, including Miss Marion Ross of this place, did excellent work, and the concert is said to have been the best held in Granville for a long time. Following was the soloists' program:

Marion Grayson Rose, soprano; Jane Ling-Graninger, contralto; Joseph Schenke, tenor; Marcus Kellerman, bass; Fannie Judson Farcar, pianist; chorus of women.

How I Won

BY GROVER S. GRIFFIN

Copyright, 1890 by American Press Assn.

When I chose journalism for a profession I did so because I had literary tastes and a facility for writing. I soon found that the principal ingredient in the success of a newspaper man, especially while on the lower rungs of the ladder, is getting ahead of the other fellows. I succeeded in the routine work of collecting news and was thinking of giving up journalism when something happened, in other words, my opportunity arrived.

The president of the United States proposed to Russia and Japan who were then at war, to settle their differences. A meeting was called between the representatives of the two nations to meet at Portsmouth. Our American newspapers are not used as they are in Europe, so I went instead of one another in news matters pertaining to government and diplomacy or my opportunity did not arise. It occurred at this time that I was very young, had no acquaintance, educated to give me an advance, and did not distinguish myself as a professional. The managing editor of an obscure paper sent me to Portsmouth simply to transmit the news as it came out, with comments on the crowds and descriptions of the distinguished participants.

But a wild dream came into my head. It occurred to me that if I signed among several hundred newspaper correspondents and get in at the treaty of peace, if ever made and telegraph it to my paper so that it could be published before any other paper published it I might make myself famous as a newspaper man. And here opportunity came again to help me. On my journey to Portsmouth I traveled on the same train as one of the Russian representatives. He had with him number of attendants, consisting of secretaries, stenographers and servants. I made the acquaintance of several of the suit and it occurred to me that I might possibly make a deal with some one of them to give me the news for a consideration. I doubt if I should have attempted to get anything out of a Japanese in that fashion, but I knew that a Russian was much more amenable to the pressure of funds.

I fell into conversation with one whom I shall call Potsdoff, a copyist. I gave him a cigar and several drinks from my flask. I explained to him my desire and found a willing listener. I ended by offering him $50 if he could get me the treaty, should one be made, in time to send it to my paper for publication ahead of all other journals.

It may seem remarkable that I should have offered so small a sum for such a valuable prize. The truth is I offered him all the money that had been given for my expenses after paying for my tickets, and he had no knowledge of where he could sell his information elsewhere. Besides this, when the deal was made neither of us dreamed that there would be any success in our efforts. We had plenty of time on the train to concoct any scheme that might be necessary for the transmission of information from him to me. This was the most delicate part of our work, for after the convention once met and proceeded with its deliberations any possessing its secrets would be watched carefully.

The plan we adopted was this. I would take one meal a day at the hotel where Potsdoff's master put up. I would wait outside the dining room until I saw Potsdoff go in, then go in myself and, going out before him, pick up his hat instead of my own, re-enter taking mine. At the next meal we would change hats back again.

Well, the convention met and began its deliberations. Potsdoff and I did not have any need to change hats till the articles of the treaty were being brought up for discussion. Then as soon as an article was written out my man, who was engaged in the work, would put a copy of it, written on thin paper in his hat, and I would soon after be its possessor.

I was in a continuous state of anxiety lest the plenipotentiaries should fail to agree and I should have all the trouble for nothing. Besides, I found that if a treaty were made and I offered it at a telegraph office in Portsmouth in advance of its release, I would not be able to get it through; therefore resolved, if I did get it, I would take a train for some small place distant from Portsmouth and telegraph it from there.

Finally the convention began discussing the articles one by one. Every time an article was agreed to, the same evening I would find a written out within the lining of the hat I would put on, to avoid the heat during the night. I was getting anxious for the convention to end and had not informed my paper that I was reserving a sum of money for a purpose and was in debt for everything received.

At last the final articles were signed and a time appointed for signing the treaty to the newspaper representatives. The evening it was signed I got the last article from Potsdoff, took a train for a near station, and the same night at 11 o'clock a telegram operator was clicking its text to my paper.

How I got home, what I did when I got there, I will not dwell upon. My position as a newspaper man was established.

NEWARK'S RELATIVE SHOT AT COLUMBUS

Sergeant Church of the Columbus police force told the local police department early this morning that Rocco Zanzo, a relative of Carmelo Altieri, a local Italian, had been shot. The son of Altieri was given a certificate by Patrolman Hinger which gave an address immediately after receiving the message from Columbus intended to find any clue or information in the neighborhood. The relatives who do not know such a man, were to report to the Office of Criminal in Columbus if located.

The details of the shooting of the relative of the Newark Italian were not disclosed and it is not known whether it was friendly or a less serious fight.

WHY "1892" Pure Spun Aluminum Kitchen Ware Is Better Than Agate or Enamel

Because it is sanitary and saves your money, time and health. The genuine spun aluminum ware, stamped with the Maltese Cross, will outlast any other cooking utensils and is guaranteed by the makers for twenty-five years.

It is pure, wholesome and hygienic—no danger of metal poisoning—cannot chip into the food, because pure SPUN Aluminum expands with the heat and will not crack, scale or peel like the old style ware.

Enamel ware is iron coated with colored glass. Heat causes the glass to chip off into the food in minute particles, which, taken into the stomach, is apt to cause serious troubles, including cancer, according to some medical authorities.

"1892" Pure Spun Aluminum Ware is made from solid Aluminum throughout—a coating of glass—and expands uniformly under heat. It cannot crack, scale, peet like the out of date enameled utensils; it does away with all possible danger from this source.

You owe it to yourself, and to every member of the household, to give this new and better kitchen ware a practical test. If it fails to do what is claimed for it, you get your money back without a quibble or a cross word.

HOBSON, OUT WITH ANOTHER WAR SCARE IN ENDEAVOR TO GET LARGE APPROPRIATIONS

Washington, Dec. 16.—Representative James A. Tawney of Minnesota, chairman of the house appropriations committee, late yesterday afternoon, practically charged the existence of a conspiracy between the war department and military enthusiasts in congress to create such nation-wide sentiment as will force congress to make enormous appropriations for army and navy purposes. He directs attention to the propaganda of jingoism and insists that a yellow peril lecture, delivered by Representative Hobson of Alabama, who has been clamoring for a big navy and army for several years, and the report of the secretary of war are practically identical. Mr. Tawney said:

"There is something peculiar about this matter. I do not like to use the word conspiracy in connection with it but there may be interesting developments when the whole story is told. This effort to get the report of the secretary of war before the American people is simply a part of a propaganda on the part of our military enthusiasts to secure support for the appropriations. Hobson, for the last four or five years, has attempted to scare the American people by presenting the danger of a Japanese invasion and now the war department has joined in an effort to Hobsonize the whole country."

"Anyone who has either heard or read Hobson's lectures and the report will find it difficult to distinguish one from the other. The chief of staff of the army, General Leonard Wood, and Mr. Hobson have another motive in endeavoring to influence the public mind by misrepresenting our preparedness for war. They realize that the Democrats will control the house of representatives in the Sixty-second congress, and that appropriations for war purposes will originate in that body and under the control of that body."

"Perhaps they think that this is their golden opportunity for securing large appropriations so that they may make those appropriations the basis for larger allorments for military and naval purposes in the next congress than they otherwise could hope to obtain."

"These advocates of militarism ignore entirely the chief weapons of defense that we have—our great natural resources and the spontaneity with which the patriotism of our people would be aroused in the event of assault of any kind from any foreign foe. They likewise ignore our geographical isolation."

"The fact that some leading newspapers of the country have violated their promise to the secretary under which they received advance copies of this report, indicates to me that

LOOTS A BANK OF $2,500, THEN KILLS SELF WHEN SURROUNDED BY POSSE.

Holds Up Cashier and Gags and Binds Five Men in Back Room.

Salem, Kan., Dec. 16.—Earl Ward aged 20, who robbed the State Bank of Paradise, at Paradise, Kan., securing $2,500, killed himself with a gun when surrounded by a posse of rangers. He lived north of that place, late yesterday.

Ward's suicide came as a climax to a series of sensational robberies. He had made a hard ride for liberty, but as he ran across the entire section had been notified to return home, the posse easily picked up his trail.

For five hours he eluded the rangers, but about sunset he was surrounded. When the members of the posse reached him side they found a gun which Ward had stolen from the bank. The bank officials say all the stolen money was recovered.

Ward, who lived 12 miles northeast of Laramie, Kan., went to Paradise Tuesday night. He told people there he was riding across the state on a wagon and he attracted only casual notice. He went to a hardware store and bought a revolver, ammunition and a coil of rope. He then went to the bank, where he coerced Cashier Bert Oberton and four other men with the weapon. After the safe had been opened by the cashiers at Ward's direction, the five men were marched into a back room and forced to lie on the floor. The lone bandit then tied the men and gagged them with a gunny sack.

After searching the vaults, securing $2,500, Ward walked over to the hardware store, purchased a rifle and a large number of cartridges and mounted his horse, rode rapidly away. At the time the men in the bank were discovered by customers and were released. A posse was formed and started after Ward, catching up with him late yesterday.
